Race fans roll easily into Sparta

Racing, not traffic, was center of attention

The second time was the charm for the Kentucky Speedway. Unlike last year, traffic flowed freely all day into the speedway on Saturday for the second running of the Quaker State 400 Sprint Cup race that was won by Brad Keselowski. There were no delays at any time reported on any local road.

Last year, a massive traffic jam known by some as “Carmageddon 2011” brought traffic to a halt on I-71 and most area roads as motorists tried to get to the speedway.

An estimated 10,000 race fans with tickets could not get to their seats last year because of inadequate parking and access roads.

This year things went smoothly thanks to $12 million in improvements that added 20,000 new parking spaces, widened roads and the construction of a pedestrian tunnel underneath KY 35 leading from the new parking lot to the track.

The Speedway also coordinated with the Kentucky State Police to formulate a traffic and parking plan to ensure every car that arrived at the speedway would quickly be parked.

Monday, Speedway owner Bruton Smith and general manger Mark Simendinger were praised for the work they oversaw. Last year, however, they were harshly criticized.

A few hours before the race, Smith said he was happy the improvements had been successful.

“We don’t see traffic backed up all the way to Cincinnati,” Smith said. “We were totally ready. Everybody worked really hard to get us where we are.”

Simendinger said this year traffic was “a non story.”

One Cincinnati couple said last year it took them seven and a half hours to make the 53 mile-trip from their home to the track. This year, the same trip took one hour.

Fewer people came to this year’s race and that also helped alleviate congestion. Last year, the 107,000-seat speedway was sold out a week before the race. Although no official attendance figures were announced, most estimate Saturday’s at about 80,000. Attendance also appeared to be down at Thursday’s NASCAR truck race and at Friday’s Nationwide race.

The extreme heat, which reached 145 degrees in the infield on Saturday was one reason some fans stayed away. It’s also believed some fans didn’t return because they are still upset over last year’s problems.

Area business owners noticed the lower numbers.

“We still had a great weekend but our bottom line was down about 20 percent from last year,” said Neal O’Conner, owner of the Sparta BP, a convenience store across the street from the speedway. He said his wife, who manages the nearby Finish Line Marathon, reported her store’s income was down even more than that from last year.

Particularly hard hit were owners of private campgrounds and parking lots near the track.

“I’d say we’re off by more than 50 percent,” said Denny French who manages two parking lots/campgrounds adjacent to the track. “We were overflowing last year but this year there’s not much business at all.”

French feels the newly added parking and camping areas at the speedway and fewer people going to the race were the cause of his lack of business.

“It’s a great relief that things are working,” said Governor Steve Beshear after arriving at the track Saturday afternoon. “The payoff is walking around here seeing smiles on the faces because everybody was able to get in here easily. They’re able to walk around and enjoy themselves like NASCAR fans do. That means this race will continue to build every year from now on.”

Gallatin County Sheriff Josh Neale said the race fans were generally well behaved and that there were few reports of injuries or calls for assistance.

See page 5 for a complete rundown on all the races at the track last week.

Larry Lawrence’s trial begins

The federal tax evasion trial of well-known Gallatin attorney and businessman Larry Lawrence of Sparta resumed Tuesday after opening last week.

In his opening a federal prosecutor said that agents seized $800,000 from Lawrence’s safety deposit boxes and claimed the money was unreported income.

Several Gallatin County residents have or will testify at the trial including former Gallatin County Judge/executive Kenny French and Gallatin County Fire Chief and EMS Director Barry Alexander.

Before he testified, Alexander said he assumed he would be questioned about five acres of land Lawrence donated to the county for a firehouse.

Lawrence’s attorney James Kiefer of Indianapolis insisted his client already paid taxes on the money investigators found and that the money was for retirement.

“Mr. Lawrence’s great-grandfather lost everything he had in the Great Depression,” Kiefer said in U. S. District Court in Covington. “That left an indelible mark on Mr. Lawrence. He doesn’t trust banks or stock markets.”

Kiefer told the jury of 11 women and four men that Lawrence first started stockpiling money in a freezer in his Sparta home. When the amount grew to $200,000 in cash, Lawrence moved it to

Across Kentucky, unemployment rose from 7.8 percent in April to 8.1 percent in May.

Woodford County recorded the lowest May jobless rate in the Commonwealth at 5.3 percent. It was followed by Hancock County at 5.5 percent, Shelby County at 6.1 percent, Fayette County at 6.2 percent and Union County at 6.3 percent.

Fulton County had the Commonwealth’s highest jobless rate in May at 19.9 percent. It was followed by Magoffin County at 16.1 percent, Leslie County at 14.1 percent, and Jackson County at 14 percent.

It’s so hot around here.....

This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

It’s so darn hot, I can’t even get my dog to come out from underneath the porch. Believe me, if Lucky doesn’t want to chase a ball, it’s hot.

That’s not all. It’s so hot, my camera strap melted as I shot pictures of the big race at the Kentucky Speedway on Saturday. I guess that’s understandable. A reporter I know carried a hand-held thermometer that showed the temperature was 148 degrees on the track’s infield. I haven’t been that hot since 1994 at a Gallatin County High School graduation in the old, un-air conditioned gymnasium. I went through two camera straps that afternoon.

It’s so hot, you can fry more than an egg on the sidewalk. This afternoon I plan to cook up a T-bone steak and a baked potato on the walk leading to my house.

It’s so hot even Republican Mitt Romney seems cool.

It’s so hot, I heard our local farmers are feeding their chickens shaved ice to prevent them from laying hard-boiled eggs and their cows are producing powdered milk.

I don’t know if I’ve ever seen temperatures so high for so many days. It’s been sizzling for so long, fishermen are catching fried catfish and poached bass in the Ohio River.

It has been so steamy I jump in my hot tub to cool down when I get home from work.

It’s amazing how the heat changes your perspective on just about everything. As I watched television over the weekend, I realized it’s so hot outside, Angelina Jolie, Sofia Vergara and Jennifer Lopez seem only lukewarm these days.

I’m glad I planted a bunch of Jalapeno peppers in my garden this year. It’s so hot, I munch on them to keep my mouth cool.

I can’t be sure about this but someone at the grocery store this morning told me it’s so hot the Devil is thinking about building a second house in Gallatin County because it reminded him of home.

On days like these it’s so hot I can sit on the back porch and cool off with a big mug of warm beer.

You can’t help but notice all this searing weather puts people in a bad mood. This morning, I saw a woman at the Warsaw Carryout hit a man with her purse when he asked: “Is it hot enough for you?”

It’s so hot, I saw a woman in a bikini being refused service at a restaurant for being over-dressed.

It’s so hot, I’ve heard the government is thinking about putting ice on the protected list because of fears it may become extinct.

It’s so hot, I can boil water on the hood of my truck, I’ve learned asphalt has a liquid state and I’ve developed a romantic relationship with my air conditioner.

Finally, it’s so hot, you don’t need a calendar to tell you it’s July in Kentucky.

Traffic flowed freely into the Kentucky Speedway all afternoon Saturday.

July will continue to sizzle

One of the hottest summers on record will continue to sizzle this week with little rain in sight. The National Weather Service says there’s no relief in sight from the extreme temperatures that have gripped Gallatin County and much of the nation recently.

Forecasters predict high temperatures here will reach the mid-90s to 100 degrees every day through Sunday.

That would add up to 11 straight days of highs well above 90. Last summer, our area tied a record with 17 days above 90 degrees.

The hot and dry weather isn’t expected to end Sunday either. The long-range forecast, through July 15, calls for above-average temperatures and below-average precipitation.

What health care reform means for Kentucky

Voting 5-4, the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the federal health-care reform law, the core of which requires individuals to get health insurance or pay a fine.

The decision means about 280,000 more Kentuckians will qualify for Medicaid, and about 220,000 will qualify for insurance under a state exchange where they can choose from various policies. More than 900,000 Kentuckians who were previously denied coverage for pre-existing conditions will now also be able to get coverage.

Those who are newly eligible will be able to get health insurance in two ways. Individuals with an income as much as 400 percent above the poverty level will be able to buy insurance through a state insurance exchange. Individuals who are part of the exchange will get federal subsidies to help pay their premiums.

The other way will be through the law's expansion of Medicaid coverage. People who have an income 133 percent above the federal poverty level will qualify for Medicaid starting in 2014.

Though the Supreme Court also upheld the law's Medicaid expansion, it ruled the federal government could not take away existing Medicaid funding from states that decide to opt out of the expansion. If Kentucky opts to expand Medicaid, it will eventually cost the state money. For the first five years, the federal government will foot the bill for those who are newly eligible. But in 2019, states will have to start paying 10 percent of that sum.

Aside from more Kentuckians being eligible for health insurance, the law will mean:

- Children will be able to stay on their parents' insurance up to the age of 26.
- The Medicare "doughnut hole" in prescription drug coverage will be eliminated, something that will impact 129,000 Kentuckians.
- Health plans will be required to cover preventive services like screenings.

And, though "today's ruling is no way going to diminish the toxicity and politicking on both sides," most people agree children will benefit, said Terry Brooks, executive director of Kentucky Youth Advocates. He said the law provides additional oral health coverage, allows foster children to keep health insurance coverage until the age of 25; and provides "a dedicated stream of revenue for school-based health services."

First Lady says 'thanks' for Bo's birthday card

Dear Editor:

Last December I saw a news story about President Obama's dog having a birthday, so as a joke for the President's daughters, I sent their dog a birthday card, signed our dog's name, and included a picture of Jewel (our dog).

A few months later, a big envelope addressed to Jewel Kelleher arrived in the mail. It was from the White House.

Inside was a letter on White House stationery thanking Jewel for the birthday card. It was signed by Michelle Obama. A photo of their dog, Bo, was also enclosed. We are the talk of the neighborhood and the photo is now on the wall in a nice frame.

I wonder if it was assumed the birthday card from Jewel actually came from a child. If so, then it was wonderful that it was answered.

Michelle Obama has shown she has a sense of humor, so I wonder if it wasn't just a "right back at ya" from her. I like that idea.

There are some who say she and her girls never saw the card and it was all done by an assistant with a signature machine. That's okay. Maybe it made someone smile.

Others may say the letter was sent just to get my vote. So, I suggest that other politicians running for office send cards to our dogs. You'll get my vote. None of your budget plans make any sense to us.

Kentucky Commentary

'Obamacare' may be big factor in fall elections

"Obamacare . . . is the gift that keeps on giving," Sen. Mitch McConnell said a few months ago, and he wasn't the first Republican strategist to say that. He could still be right, as he and his allies use the Supreme Court decision upholding the law as a rallying point to oust President Barack Obama.

But if Democrats can regain control of the conversation about health care, and help Americans get past the labels and sound bites and understand what the law is really doing — especially in poor, sickly places like Kentucky — the law and the decision could help them in November.

The election will still be largely about the economy, because relatively few voters will feel the effects of the health care law; but it will be the major secondary factor because it sets up a clearer choice on a big issue.

If Obama is re-elected, he can veto any repeal legislation. If he is defeated, the 2010 law's individual mandate to buy health insurance is probably dead, and that provision is the law's linchpin. So the election will be the closest thing we have had to a national referendum in modern times.

Maybe Chief Justice John Roberts had that in mind as he voted to uphold the mandate, and the fine for not following it, as a legitimate use of Congress's power to tax. He concluded his opinion, "The Court does not express any opinion on the wisdom of the Affordable Care Act. Under the Constitution, that judgment is reserved to the people."

Thus did Roberts define the law as a political issue, and a simple one. Taxes are always a voting issue, and when combined with Obama's 2009 argument that the mandate is "absolutely not a tax increase," Americans' inherent suspicions about the role and power of government, Republicans have strong talking points.

The tax will only be paid by those who choose not to buy health insurance, so Republicans will probably also argue that your state taxes may go up because the states will eventually have to pay 10 percent of the cost of adding about 30 million people to Medicaid. Those points could help Republicans in their efforts to gain control of the Kentucky House, either in this fall's elections or the organizational session of January 2013.

Critics of the law cry "socialized medicine," but our health system started being socialized when health insurance started more than two centuries ago, and it was largely completed in the mid-20th century, when most employees got coverage at their workplaces. The individual mandate will complete the system by bringing in the working poor who can't afford insurance and the young and healthy who now pass it up. This used to make perfect sense to many Republicans, including Mitt Romney, who implemented it as governor of Massachusetts. But McConnell and Republican strategists, whose top priority is denying Obama a second term, turned around opinion in their party.

It remains to be seen just how much of a voting issue the law will be. The debate seems sure to boost election turnout, but it's anyone's guess which side that will help. Before the decision, most Democrats expected to lose the mandate and maybe the whole law. Many advised Obama to run against the Supreme Court, which got only 52 percent favorability in a recent poll. Roberts has now made that impossible and clearly defined the issue for the political process, while making his court seem less political. But that makes him a smart politician.

 safety deposit boxes because he grew nervous about its safety.
 “He was going to retire when he had $1 million in cash,” Kiefer said.
 Assistant U. S. Attorney Elaine Leonhard argued the problem with Lawrence’s retirement plan he didn’t pay taxes on the money. Lawrence is charged with three counts of filing false federal tax returns in 2005, 2006 and 2007. If found guilty, he could serve up to three years in prison.
 Leonhard said the unreported income came from withdrawals from a special escrow account for lawyers, reimbursement expenses from lawyers who rented office space from Lawrence, rental income from those same lawyers, rental income from residential tenants and cash from Racers Gentleman’s Club in Sparta, a strip club Lawrence co-owned Kiefer admitted some of the rental income, expense reimbursements and withdrawals should have been recorded as taxable income but blamed the mistake on a bookkeeper. He said the former bookkeeper wasn’t doing her job properly.

 Kiefer also said cash Lawrence received from the strip club was repayment for money he advanced the club and was not taxable income.
 Leonhard described how fees were collected from the women who stripped at Racers. She said the women would put money in a white envelope and deliver it to Lawrence once a week. Strippers are independent contractors required to pay house fees to dance at the club. The strippers also had to pay a parking fee.
 Kiefer said the strip club and the neighboring gas station, motel and restaurant Lawrence owned never made a profit and the fees were just an attempt to recoup some of the losses.
 “In our view, this should never have been a criminal case because Mr. Lawrence never intentionally filed false returns,” Kiefer said. “We are here because the bookkeeper didn’t do her job.”
 Kiefer also said Lawrence couldn’t wait to take the stand to defend himself.

Weather Trivia

How fast do raindrops fall?

Answer: Raindrops fall between 7 and 18 mph in still air.

Weather History

July 4, 1776 - Thomas Jefferson paid for his first thermometer and signed the Declaration of Independence. According to his weather memorandum book, at 2 p.m. it was cloudy and the temperature was 76 degrees.

Sports and Wildlife

Keselowski cruises at Quaker 400

Brad Keselowski, 28, beat the heat and the rest of the field at Kentucky Speedway, Saturday night, to win the Quaker State 400.

Keselowski out-ran second-place finisher Kasey Kahne by .4399 second in his No. 2 Penske car to become the first three-time winner in Sprint Cup action this season.

He is the second driver to own both the Sprint

Cup (NSCS) and NASCAR Nationwide (NNS) titles at the track. He won the Nationwide 300 title last year.

"We were gutsy today, had a fast car and drove to the lead on the first run," said Keselowski after the race. "Hard work equals results and today this team got the results."

Rounding out the top five were Denny Hamlin, Dale Earnhardt, Jr., and Jeff Gordon.

"I'm great, I feel good," said Keselowski about driving for the third straight night in hot, humid conditions. He was second in Thursday's truck race.

The secret to victory was fuel management, as he ran on one tank of fuel for the final 59 laps. He drove his backup car after damaging his primary car during practice.

Keselowski led three times for 68 laps and stayed in tenth place in the Sprint Cup standings.

Points leader Matt Kenseth finished seventh and now owns an 11-point lead over Earnhardt, Jr.

There were four cautions for 24 laps, which was similar to last year's inaugural event. That race featured lots of green flag racing.

Before the start of Saturday's race, track owner Bruton Smith called for more mandatory caution flags from NASCAR to bunch up the fields.

"Call it what you want, but we've got to have caution flags," said Smith. "You just can't sit there with nothing happening, it ruins the event and damages our sport."

Nationwide Race

Austin Dillon easily out-raced a 43-driver field in Friday night's Nationwide Series 300 race.

The 25-year-old started on the pole position and led the first 81 laps and 192 out of 200. He won by 9.8 seconds.

Kurt Busch earned his first Kentucky Speedway NNS top-five finish.

The race had a record 113 consecutive green-flag laps.

World Truck Series

James Buescher enjoyed his first NASCAR Camping World Truck Series win Thursday night.

His No. 31 truck won by 3.8 seconds over second-place finisher Brad Keselowski's No. 19 ride.

It was Buescher's second career win at the Speedway after claiming a 150-mile ARCA win on May 9, 2009.

"I'm just really proud of everyone on the Turner Motorsports Team," he said after the race. "My wife told me this morning she found a picture of the trophy and told me she wanted it and you gotta make the wife happy so we got to Victory Lane."

Victory lap

Brad Keselowski took a victory lap with the American flag after winning the Quaker State 400 at the Kentucky Speedway on Saturday night. Keselowski ran strong all night and led for 68 laps. Kasey Kahne finished second, Denny Hamlin third, popular Dale Earnhardt Jr. fourth, and Jeff Gordon finished fifth.

Sports in Kentucky by Bob Watkins

It's been three summers since Jeremy Evans left Western Kentucky University as a 22-year-old with 190-something pounds stretched over 6-feet-9-inches. NBA Draft? Doubtful. But some dreams come true!

Media buzz for the 2010 Draft was ga-ga for John Wall at number one and other Kentucky one-and-doners. Long after David Stern's bed-time and just before they turned out television's stage lights at Madison Square Garden, two years ago, the Utah Jazz chose, with its 55th pick . . . Jeremy Evans.

Flash forward to today. Still six pounds shy of 200 and still mostly in the shadows, Evans spends his work days at 301 W. South Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah.

His contribution to the Jazz over two seasons has been modest: 3.1 points and 1.9 rebounds in 78 games (three starts).

But last spring he won the NBA Slam Dunk contest.

Evans is now a restricted free agent. Guess what? Utah wants him back and offered a qualifier. As a restricted free agent, he can sign an offer sheet with any NBA team, with Utah retaining the right to match it.

Suddenly, a skinny, modest kid from Crossett, Arkansas is on the market.

And the former Hill-topper is posted up for his next $lam dunk. A multi-year contract worth more than $3 million a season.

Suddenly, 2010's 55th NBA pick at 25 years old, is about to be a multi-millionaire.

America. I love this place!

2012 NBA Draft

Anthony Davis — 18-year old kid multi-millionaire. First year, not counting The Brow revenue and endorsements, $4,340,520 first year salary, $4,838,880 for the second, and more to come.

The Brow can be the NBA marketer's new dream guy, will be hugely popular in New Orleans, and maybe New Face of the NBA. Bonus? The Brow arrives with a copy-righted image ready to market. Little wonder David Stern is beaming.

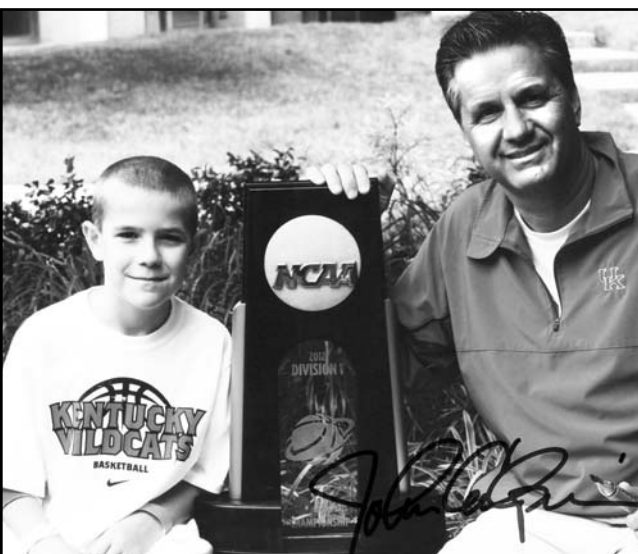

Conclusion: On a one-to-10 scale, Davis's decision-making on and off-court, uncanny good fortune (no injuries) since he chose Kentucky amount to 10-plus. Amazing.

Prediction. Davis's number 23 will be in the Rupp Arena rafters sooner than later. And, his name will be among Kentucky's most popular front row memories — Macy, Dampier, Nash, Tyra, Griffith, McDaniels and Haskins.

• Michael Kidd-Gilchrist. Chosen No. 2 overall, Kidd-Gilchrist may be Michael Jordan's new Scottie Pippin. Worth more than the price — $3,835,600 guaranteed first year.

Conclusion: Having lost a father and uncle, but with mother as anchor, Kidd-Gilchrist understands loss and knows happiness is less about money and more about character.

Kidd-Gilchrist is the perfect man-player to offset if not replace NBA thug image.

Hayden Dickerson, 9, of Warsaw, met UK coach John Calapari last week at a four-day basketball camp. Above, they are shown with UK's championship trophy. Hayden took second place in the free-throw shooting contest.

Here is what our friends and neighbors have reported this week:

Rae McEntyre recently returned from a day trip to Kentucky State Historic Sites in Richmond and Lexington. Her first stop was White Hall Mansion in Richmond, to view the Italianate home originally built by Revolutionary War General Green Clay in 1798-99. The home originally contained seven rooms, but was renovated in 1860 by Cassius M. Clay, who changed its name from Clermont to White Hall and added thirty-seven rooms built around the original seven. The home remained in the Clay family until 1968, when family members donated it to the State of Kentucky. After more renovation and preservation, the stately home was opened to the public as a state historic site in 1971. Rae's next stop was Waveland, a Civil War mansion originally built by Joseph Bryan, who was married to Daniel Boone's sister. It is a two-story L-shaped Greek Revival home built in 1847, and three original outbuildings remain. The home was allegedly lost to gambling at one time, and was sold at auction. It is now maintained and operated as part of the Kentucky State Park System. Rae said she quite enjoyed her tour of these beautiful old mansions and will be visiting more of them very soon.

Skip and Penny Smith have just returned from a long weekend in Gatlinburg. They stayed at the Baymont Inn, and attended the Dixie Stampede. They spent time at the Illusions Museum, did some shopping, and enjoyed their time together. Their wish to see a bear was granted, as they saw a little bear cub running across the road.

Mary Jane Day participated in the "Feed the Children" project at the high school last Thursday afternoon, a program sponsored by the Speedway and the Hope Foundation in Gallatin County. She said they had lots of good help and she found it a most rewarding experience. On Thursday evening, she attended the first Riverfront concert, and very much enjoyed seeing the Makeshifts as they performed Rockabilly. Even with the heat, there was a nice breeze, so it was fairly comfortable. Saturday, Mary Jane attended her first NASCAR race, and said it was great fun, although very loud, and her earplugs came in handy. Another item checked off her bucket list!

Beth Oldendick and three of her children, Theo, Gabby, and Ellie, spent four days in Louisville, where they took part in the clean-up and repair of a Retirement and Nursing Home Community Center. The group project was sponsored by the Christian Church of Pikeville. It was well attended, and the help was much appreciated. Beth and the children are now enjoying a well-deserved vacation in Gulf Shores, Alabama. Hopefully, they will get to see the wild bottle-nose dolphins and other exciting and fascinating aquatic creatures. We hope to hear more from them upon their return.

Betty and Boyd Li-

onberger hosted a birthday celebration for their grandson, Matthew Hamilton, who is now 17 years old. Betty prepared a cool lunch of salads and sandwiches, and Matthew's mother, Julie Hamilton, supplied the birthday cake. Other attendees at the party were Matthew's father, Tim Hamilton, and his sisters, Hannah Hamilton, and Kristina Turner with her husband, Rob. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MATTHEW!

Patsy Cayton Brown reports that the Cayton family reunion was held June 23 at the Riverside Park, and nearly all family members attended. All together, they had 65-70 people there, with one nephew, Chris Mattox, traveling all the way from Oklahoma to enjoy the festivities with his family. Patsy had house guests from Thursday through Saturday that week, but thoroughly enjoyed having them and loved seeing her family all together. The family has their reunion at the same time every year to commemorate the memory of their Mother's birthday on June 24th. Patsy said there was lots of food and lots of fun, and she is already looking forward to next year. This past week, Patsy drove to Vevay to spend time with her sisters, Myrna Lozier, Sandra Sawyer, and Marlene Lozier. They had a great time together, lying by the pool and enjoying the antics of twin nieces, Jada and Carley Towles.

I'm happy to report that Mary Rae Mattox is now home and recovering nicely from her back surgery. WELCOME HOME, MARY RAE!

Matt Marksberry and his son, Luke, went to the Quaker State 400 on Saturday. Joining them were Kawika Colon and Jake Key. They had a great time and are looking forward to next year.

Laura Marksberry and her son, Noah, had a mommy and son day out. They went to steak and shake for lunch and then saw a movie.

Friday evening guests of Carol Estes were Matt, Laura, Luke, and Noah Marksberry. After dinner, they made homemade ice cream and watched the Nationwide 300 race on TV.

Fall Pumpkin Festival planned

Do you remember the fun we had at the Pumpkin Festival last year? Mark your calendar for the fifth annual Fall Pumpkin Festival on Saturday, October 6, at Riverfront Park in Warsaw.

The planning committee will meet on Tuesday, July 10, 5:30 pm at the Extension Office in Warsaw. If you have an interest in helping us plan the festival, come on down at 5:30. We welcome new members to the planning committee. Pizza and pop will be provided at this planning meeting.

The July 10 agenda will include discussion about set up of game booths, food booths, craft booths, the parade, pumpkin dessert contest, Miss Pumpkinfest pageant, scarecrow contest and other ideas. Contact the Extension Office at 586-6101 if you have ideas for this year's festival and would like to participate on the planning committee.

Stay Hydrated This Summer

Staying hydrated while working outdoors or participating in sports or recreational activities can be a challenge, especially during hot weather. Plain water is the best beverage to replace lost fluids. Sugars and electrolytes can slow the absorption process.

Water makes up about two-thirds of the body's weight and almost 75 percent of the brain's weight. We lose almost 4 percent of the water in our body through our skin each day. If you are sweating, you are losing even greater amounts. This increases your need to drink fluids.

Adults need at least eight cups of liquid each day. This amount varies depending on body size, level of physical activity, age, overall health and climate. Fluid intake needs differ for some people including older adults, athletes and people who work outside.

When trying to stay hydrated cool water between 40 and 50 degrees is recommended. Don't depend on your thirst. Drink water before you feel thirsty. Drink water before and after outdoor activity.

Sip water often while outdoors. One third to three fourths cup every 10 to 20 minutes is suggested. The body can only absorb about one cup of water every 20 minutes. Be sure to continue to drink fluids after work is finished or outdoor activity ends.

Not only is water important to reduce the risk of dehydration, it is also important for proper digestion, organ function, controlling body temperature and cooling working muscles.

Ask Doctor Dirt...

Cattle need special considerations during heat wave

The following is from Roy Burris, U.K. Extension Livestock Specialist in Princeton Kentucky. Considering the weather we're having, it's well worth reading.

Severe drought and hot weather will likely increase the questions that you receive concerning cattle and cattle feeds. Most of you have been through this routine before but a few reminders might be beneficial, especially to new agents.

(1) Beware of poisonous plants. Drought and hot weather increase the likelihood of cattle consuming poisonous plants. Several poisonous plants, like perilla mint aren't normally consumed by cattle but since they grow in the shade where cattle are spending most of their time, cattle might now consume them. My suggestion is to take hay to these areas where cattle congregate so they won't be as tempted to consume any "unusual" plants.

(2) Keep water and shade available, of course. Don't just assume that automatic waterers are working. Check them frequently.

(3) Early weaning of calves might be beneficial to minimize the nutrient needs of spring-calving cows. Calves can be fed to make efficient gains and sold as heavier, weaned calves.

(4) Alternative feeds will be an option to decrease feed costs...so don't be surprised at what folks will consider feeding. Check with Dr. Lehmkuhler or me if you have questions.

(5) NITRATE POISONING is a real possibility. That is one of nature's cruel tricks...folks are trying to salvage corn crop disasters but toxic nitrate levels are definite possibilities. Drought, heat, stunting and high fertility levels mean that increased nitrate levels are likely. Nitrate levels should be assessed before proceeding to salvage the corn crop. Corn plants with high nitrate levels should not be grazed, fed as green chop or cut for hay. Nitrate levels will not decrease in hay during storage. Ensiling can be a viable option since about 40 to 60 percent of nitrate is lost during fermentation but check for nitrate since extremely high levels might be difficult to overcome. Don't feed the silage until it has had about 3 weeks to become fully ensiled. Cattle may become accustomed to low levels of nitrate if they are gradually adjusted to them.

(6) Cattle producers must keep an eye on their feed stocks for winter feeding. Many people had lower hay yields this spring and feeding now will likely decrease their hay reserves. They might consider purchasing feed now before prices get higher.

This is just a quick primer on drought related questions. I hope that we can get enough rain to reverse this situation but, considering the time of year, it doesn't appear promising (in my opinion).

Doctor Dirt is really Dave Hull, Gallatin County Extension Agent for Agriculture. If you have farm or garden questions for the good doctor, stop by or call the extension office at 567-5481. Or, email him at dhull@uky.edu.

Planting by the Signs

by Phil Case

First, my apologies to you and the staff of the Gallatin County News for totally missing last week's deadline and thus the paper entirely. I had an email from Clay Warnick at about 4 last Tuesday afternoon asking if I was planning to have a column. Well, I was certainly planning to have one but totally forgot it – a first in my 45 or so years in journalism!

I hate it when my paying job at Frankfort's daily newspaper gets in the way of the fun stuff I do for the GCN!

Even as I explain my absence from last week's edition – just in case you were wondering – discussing planting is becoming something of a moot point unless we start getting some significant rain. I know you had some over the weekend in your area, but when the sun pops right back out and the thermometer sores into the 90s then things dry up pretty quickly.

That said I'm sure you're growing as weary as I am from hearing about "The Drought" nonstop. Yes, it's here. Yes, we hope it doesn't stay all summer. But, yes, we'll get through it. Just try to keep things watered unless watering restrictions are put in place and let your yards go dormant. They're not dead, just sleeping and superficial watering can be more detrimental than helpful.

But David Hull, Gallatin County's Extension agriculture agent, can address all that more specifically in his column or by giving him a call and I'll write about planting by the phases of the moon and signs of the zodiac.

The moon is in the dark phase now, the full moon having come into force at 2:52 p.m. Tuesday, July 3. It will remain in force until the next new moon at 12:24 a.m. on July 19. During this period be planting only those veggies that produce beneath the ground, if you are planting anything at all.

The signs find our monthly series of so-so signs underway now and continuing through Sunday, July 8. Specifically, Capricorn is in force today (Wednesday), Thursday and Friday with Aquarius (the knees) ruling Saturday and Sunday. If there's anything we're "blessed" with this month it's plenty of so-so signs since the month ends with another bunch of 'em.

Very fertile planting for below-ground producers is on tap for Monday and Tuesday, July 9-10 when the sign moves to Pisces (the feet), one of the four most fertile signs. The challenge is that with soil moisture levels as low as they currently are, we're having enough trouble keeping plants alive that are already growing – let alone sticking the seeds or seedlings in bone dry soil and expecting them to germinate or grow.

Sorry, I got back to the dry weather for a moment after promising to leave that to David.

Next Wednesday and Thursday, July 11-12, the killing sign Aries (the head) comes to rule. Even if you're thinking about planting just, as the late, great Mark Twain said of exercise, "...lie down until that thought goes away!" No planting when killing signs are in force.

And, again, the dark moon is in force throughout this period.

Making Changes

Continuing through July 10, we find a fine stretch for making changes like stopping smoking, starting a diet, weaning small animals or children – anything that requires making a change. The signs are going out of the body past anything that functions and the moon is in the dark phase the whole time.

Just be underway before Wednesday, July 11 when the sign returns to Aries (the head).

First Katydid

You know katydids? They're those green things with the lacy wings that you don't see often whose chirp says their name, to wit –katy-DID, katy-DID.

Well, I heard my first one of the summer on June 27 while sitting on the back porch of our house here in Your Capital City. Folk tradition has that the first frost can occur as soon as 90 days after the first katydid does his/her katy-DID! So that would put the possibility toward the end of September with the "scientific" average for the first frost being Oct. 10.

Listen when you're outside this evening. Their chorus grows nightly.

America's forestland is a prized natural resource, and anyone can help plant much-needed trees in these vital areas by joining the Arbor Day Foundation.

Through the Replanting Our National Forests campaign, the Arbor Day Foundation will honor each new member who joins the Foundation in July by planting 10 trees in forests that have been devastated by wildfi res, insects and disease.

The cost for joining the Arbor Day Foundation is a $10 donation.

America's national forests face enormous challenges, including unprecedented wildfires that have left a backlog of nearly one million acres in need of replanting. The Arbor Day Foundation has worked with the United States Forest Service for more than 20 years to plant trees in forests in need.

Our national forests need protection because they provide habitat for wildlife, keep the air clean and help ensure safe drinking water for more than 180 million Americans.

"Keeping our forests healthy is vital to the health of people and the entire planet," said John Rosenow, founder and chief executive of the Arbor Day Foundation. "By planting trees in our national forests, we will preserve precious natural resources and the benefits they provide for generations to come."

To join the Arbor Day Foundation, send a $10 membership contribution to Replanting Our National Forests, Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410.
